

LEGISLATIVE BULLETIN

State Aid Grant Funding

HB 119 proposes to appropriate money to fund twelve wastewater projects located in six municipalities. These projects all received local financing approval prior to the December 2008 moratorium on state funding, with the municipalities rightfully expecting the state to honor its commitment to pay the statutory state share of the eligible costs for the projects. A hearing on HB 119 is scheduled for Tuesday, January 17, at 11:15 a.m., in LOB Room 210, before the House Finance Committee. Municipal officials from Portsmouth, Nashua, Berlin, Durham, Lebanon, and the Conway Village Fire District should contact members of the committee by phone or email to urge their support of HB 119, and should attend the hearing if possible.

Second and Third Shots Fired in Assessing Battle

Last week we reported on HB 254, the utility-backed effort to strip the Assessing Standards Board of its assessing expertise by removing two members and ensuring that most of the others know nothing about assessing. We knew there were two more bills coming, and they have arrived. The three bills together, all filed by the same representative, constitute a concerted attack on municipal assessing for the benefit of public utility companies.

Just in case decimating the ASB isn't enough, the second bill, HB 323, eviscerates it by transferring all of the board's authority to the Department of Revenue Administration. We will write more on that in a later issue.

The third bill, HB 324, is by far the most outrageous. It completely strips municipalities of their authority to assess utility properties and gives that authority to the Department of Revenue Administration. The intent and effect of the bill are to reduce assessed property values statewide by billions (not a typo) of dollars, raising tax rates and shifting tens of millions of dollars in property taxes onto residential and commercial property owners.

Some background is needed here. Public utility companies are subject to a statewide tax on their properties under RSA 83-F. This is in lieu of their paying the statewide education property tax that other property taxpayers pay. Under RSA 83-F, the Department of Revenue Administration is responsible for appraising utility property, solely for the purpose of the utility property tax. It is very clear that it is not DRA's duty, but that of the local governing body, under RSA 75:1, to "appraise . . . all . . . taxable property at its market value," with certain exceptions.

In its appraisals of utility property, DRA uses the "unit method" to determine a single value for the entire statewide business of a utility, rather than valuing separately the components or the properties in individual municipalities. The New Hampshire Supreme Court has held that the unit method is an acceptable approach, but has also held that it is not the only acceptable approach and is not required to be used by municipalities.

Once DRA appraises a utility company's property using the unit method, it allocates the total appraised value among the municipalities solely for the purpose of equalization. (We will discuss equalization another time.) That allocation is not intended to be used for local property tax purposes. However, in recent years, some utility companies have begun using the DRA allocated values in support of their local property tax appeals. As it happens, the DRA allocated values are frequently dramatically lower than the local assessed values, so it is not surprising that the utilities want to use those values to support their claims.

In a string of recent decisions, the Superior Court and the Board of Tax and Land Appeals emphatically rejected challenges by PSNH (now Eversource) and the New Hampshire Electric Cooperative to their assessments in approximately 70 municipalities. In each case, after a trial lasting several days, the tribunal issued a lengthy, carefully considered opinion in which it found the local assessments to be more credible than the utilities' or DRA's appraisals. The BTLA's criticism of the DRA appraisals noted that DRA did no appraisal of the property in any given town and did not even know what property was in each town. Rather, it merely allocated its statewide value (which itself was found to be suspect) based on cost data provided by the utility. Eversource and NHEC have appealed the BTLA decisions to the New Hampshire Supreme Court, but they are likely to lose there as well.

And that is why we have HB 324, which would require that the allocated values determined by DRA, despite being discredited by the courts and the BTLA, be the only values that may be used for local property tax purposes. Quite simply, this is the utilities' last hope.

THE EDGE

Why the silence?

We frequently get questions about whether we've noticed a particular bill and, if so, why we haven't written about it in the Legislative Bulletin.

We do notice, and follow, almost every bill that could affect municipalities, but occasionally we miss one—so please don't hesitate to mention it if you think we have. More often, there is a reason for the quiet.

First, we have only limited space (and time). The Bulletin is usually written on Thursday night and early Friday morning, and we can only write (and think) so fast. So we give priority to NHMA policy bills and other bills (whether good or bad) that are of the greatest importance. We do list all new bills of interest in the Bulletin when they are first published, and in the calendar when they are scheduled for hearings.

Second, we cannot devote our full attention to every bill, so we often defer to other organizations that are likely to share our views. For example, we know that the Business and Industry Association will usually take the lead on employment issues, the Police Chiefs Association on law enforcement issues, and the Clerks Association on election law issues.

NHMA members have adopted a policy for many years that opposes mandating the exclusive use of the unit method of valuation in the appraisal of utility property and supports the continuing right of municipalities to use any method of appraisal that has been upheld by the courts.

We intend to let every municipality, and its voters, know how much of the tax burden this scheme would shift to residential and commercial property taxpayers. We encourage all local officials to share this information with their representatives and demand that they carry out their obligation to represent the residents of their districts, not the utility companies.

The hearings on HB 323 and HB 324 have not been scheduled yet. We will let you know when they are.

ASB Bill Goes to Subcommittee

Meanwhile, the hearing this week on the aforementioned HB 254, discussed in last week's Bulletin, attracted an overflow crowd of assessors, local officials, legislators, and—of course—utility company lobbyists. Thank-you to the New Hampshire Association of Assessing Officials, which turned out so many members that the committee had to move to a double room, and to the selectman-legislators from Wilton, Sunapee, and Goffstown who spoke against the bill.

Quickly recognizing that their scheme to cleanse the Assessing Standards Board of assessing expertise had a flaw, the bill's prime sponsor and the utility lobbyists backpedaled, suggesting that it was not necessary to remove anyone from the board, as long as the utility industry could be represented on the board.

Why? The ASB was never intended to be a representative body; it was created to lend its expertise to the legislature, the Department of Revenue Administration, and local assessing officials. It was not the intent, nor should it be, that different groups of property owners get an official role in deciding how their properties should be assessed. Assessing is a learned discipline, not a political proposition to be debated and voted on by competing interest groups.

And why the utility industry? Why not also give a seat to hospitals, or farmers, or auto dealers? Why not fast-food restaurants or movie theaters?

The bill has been sent to a subcommittee, which is meeting next Thursday, January 19, at 2:00 p.m., in LOB Room 306. There will be an effort to strike a "compromise," but there is no need for a compromise. This bill should be killed.

Third, on some issues it is better to keep a low public profile but work diligently behind the scenes. Unlike some lobbyists who do most of their work in private, NHMA usually takes a very public approach—but that is not always the most effective method. Difficult as it is to believe, there are some people in the legislature who are not fans of NHMA, and our taking a strong public position could sway them in the opposite direction. In those cases, we will work sotto voce to get our members and other allies to take the lead.

And finally, there are those occasional bills that are just so obviously silly that we really don't need to say much. Notwithstanding public perception and occasional ideological swings, the legislature is, on balance, run by reasonable people who know a ridiculous bill when they see one. A few words to a committee chairman can confirm that a bill is dead on arrival, without the need for hoopla.

Bonding for Broadband

The House Science, Technology & Energy committee heard almost three hours of testimony yesterday on HB 191, the NHMA policy bill that would enable municipalities to issue bonds for the development of broadband infrastructure. Unlike last year, there was a huge crowd of local officials, business representatives, and private citizens in support of the bill—and, as always, the telecommunication lobbyists opposing it.

The bill's prime sponsor began by stating that the bill seemed like a “no brainer,” and he was right. It does nothing more than give municipalities the authority to issue bonds for broadband infrastructure, which no municipality would exercise except as a last resort when private industry is not filling the need. And there is a need in many parts of the state—areas of municipalities that are still not served by broadband, which makes those areas difficult to live and work in in today's connected economy and on-line environment.

Industry lobbyists trotted out their usual arguments. Here they are, followed by the fairly obvious answers:

1. Claim: There is no need for municipalities to build broadband infrastructure. Broadband is available almost everywhere, and the industry has “big plans” for expansion. Towns will “overbuild” where service is already available.

Answer: We've been hearing about the “big plans” for ten years. If there were no need, municipalities would not be pushing this. Does anyone really believe municipalities want to get into the internet business just for fun? If there is truly no need, then giving municipalities this authority won't hurt anything, because they won't exercise it. Remember—this needs a legislative body vote.

2. Claim: Companies like AT&T (market capitalization approximately $250 billion) and Comcast (market capitalization approximately $170 billion) shouldn't have to compete with towns like Peterborough and Hanover. It's unfair. Yes, they actually said that—repeatedly.

Answer: You're kidding, right?

3. Claim: Municipalities don't know what they're getting into. Broadband networks cost a lot to maintain, so taxes will spike and the town may end up defaulting on its bonds.

Answer: How gullible do they think legislators are? The telecommunication companies are worried about town finances and local property taxpayers? Is that why they have spent decades, and hundreds of thousands of dollars, trying to avoid paying property taxes?

All of these arguments are mere rationalizations to prevent municipalities from providing infrastructure that the industry either cannot or will not provide. Questions from committee members suggested that they were about evenly split, but we believe there is a decent chance that they will recommend passage of the bill. Please contact members of the committee and your own representatives and urge them to support HB 191.

Bill Seeks to Muzzle Local Officials—Again

For approximately the umpteenth time in approximately the same number of years, there is a bill to cripple the ability of local governments to express their opinions to the legislature. HB 223, scheduled for a hearing next Wednesday, January 18, at 1:00 p.m., in LOB Room 301, before the Municipal & County Government Committee, provides that “no recipient of a grant or appropriation of state, county, or municipal funds may use the funds to lobby or attempt to influence legislation, participate in political activity, or contribute funds to any entity engaged in these activities.” Any recipient of such a grant or appropriation would have to segregate the funds in such a manner that they are “physically and financially separate from any other funds that may be used for . . . these purposes.”

Typically these bills are directed at NHMA, but depending on which rumor you listen to, this one has either the School Boards Association or the Association of Counties as its target. Regardless, it would sweep up NHMA and numerous other organizations—the Police Chiefs Association, the Association of Assessing Officials, the Water Works Association, and the City and Town Clerks Association, to name just a few.

Do not municipal officials have free speech rights? In past years, supporters of these efforts have acknowledged that perhaps local officials should be allowed to testify at legislative hearings, but they should not be permitted to spend taxpayer funds on lobbyists. But why should this be a state decision? Every municipal legislative body—in most cases, the town meeting—has the opportunity to decide how it will spend its money; if citizens don’t want their dollars spent on legislative advocacy, they can prevent it. Most political subdivisions have decided that it is more effective to contribute to organizations that speak on their behalf, rather than to try to send elected officials to the legislature every week.

There have been variations on this theme almost every year, but HB 223 is essentially the same as HB 1560 from 2014. That bill received a committee recommendation of Inexpedient to Legislate on a 17-0 vote and died a quiet death on the House floor. We are optimistic that this bill will meet a similar fate, but nothing can ever be taken for granted. Please consider attending the hearing to speak against this bill; alternatively, contact members of the committee and ask them to kill HB 223.
